AIMS

From 31 May until 2 June, 2010, the 8th International Symposium on the Conservation of Monuments in the Mediterranean Basin will take place in Patras, Greece, following previous symposia in Bari (1989), Geneva (1991), Venice (1994), Rhodes (1997), Seville (2000), Lisbon (2004), and Orléans (2007).

This International Symposium will provide a forum for scientists, technicians and experts, in the area of conservation and restoration of monuments, to present their work and exchange ideas and experiences. During the Patras 2010 Symposium, new opportunities shall be presented to deepen the existing knowledge base regarding the problems of cultural heritage.

The theme chosen for this Symposium, "Monument Damage Hazards and Rehabilitation Technologies", refers to the natural and anthropogenic hazards on monuments, as well as to the technologies used for damage rehabilitation.

A large array of topics will enable scientists to discuss and share the main problems they encounter in their monument projects in the Mediterranean Basin.

The Symposium is addressed to restoration engineers, architects, geologists, restorers and conservators of stone artifacts and other specialists in the decay and restoration of monuments, to archaeologists and art historians and to scientists in the fields of physics, chemistry and biology. Furthermore, the Symposium aims at intriguing the interest of cultural institutions in heritage management and of manufacturers of building treatment products.
